

A man and a woman are shown from the chest up, painting a wall. The woman is in the foreground, looking up and smiling, holding a long-handled paintbrush. The man is behind her, also holding a paintbrush and looking towards the wall. The wall is being painted a vibrant orange color. The background is a plain white wall.

From summer vacations to winter holidays, it seems each season offers the perfect excuse to put off our to-do list. But be careful, homeowners: neglecting your home's maintenance could put your personal safety—and one of your largest financial investments—at serious risk.

HOUSE CARE CALENDAR:

A SEASONAL GUIDE TO MAINTAINING YOUR HOME

While it may be tempting to put off home maintenance issues, small problems can quickly lead to extensive and expensive repairs. And even if you avoid a catastrophe, those minor issues can still have a big impact. Properties that are not well maintained can lose 10 percent (or more) of their appraised value.¹

The good news is, by dedicating a few hours each season to properly maintaining your home, you can ensure a safe living environment for you and your family ... and actually increase the value of your home by one percent annually!¹

Keep a record of all your maintenance activities, repairs and upgrades for future reference, along with receipts. Not only will it help jog your memory, it can also make a big impact on buyers when it comes time to sell your home ... and potentially result in a higher selling price.

While this checklist should not be considered a complete list of your home's maintenance needs, it can serve as a general seasonal guide to maintaining your property throughout the year. It's applicable for all climates, so please share it with friends and family members who you think could benefit, no matter where their home is located.
